Shark predation and tooth wear in a population of northeastern Pacific killer whales

John K. B. Ford¹*, Graeme M. Ellis¹, Craig O. Matkin², Michael H. Wetklo¹, Lance G. Barrett-Lennard¹, Ruth E. Withler¹

¹Fisheries and Oceans Canada, Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo, British Columbia V9T 6N7, Canada
²North Gulf Oceanic Society, Homer, Alaska 99603, USA
³Vancouver Aquarium, Vancouver, British Columbia V6G 3E2, Canada

*Email: john.k.ford@dfo-mpo.gc.ca

Aquatic Biology 11: 213–224 (2011)
Supplement

The following are photos of teeth of killer whales assessed for apical tooth wear. They are arranged in chronological order to correspond to details provided in Table 3 of the main text.

Offshore, 1945-07-01, ID # 11 RBCM 5214

Offshore, 1945-07-01, ID # 13 Carl (1945)
Offshore, 1945-07-01, ID # 17 Carl (1945)

Offshore, 1945-07-01, ID # 20 Carl (1945)
Transient, 1970-06, ID T002

Resident, 1973-08-07, ID B4 RBCM 8386
Transient 1976-04-09, RBCM 12844

Transient, 1979-01-18, 1001 RBCM 10001
Transient, 1981-06-23 RBCM 10402

Resident, 1986-08-17, ID L66 RBCM 16006
Resident, 1989-04-11, ID L14 RBCM 16814

Transient, 1990-07-28
Resident, 1995-12-12, ID J4 (note: anterior teeth damaged post mortem)

Resident, 1996-05-21
Resident, 2000-03-18 ID J18

Resident, 2006-07-18, IDC21
Transient 2007-05-18

Transient 2009-03-29